

Page Turners

July 11, 2017 (Next Meeting: Tuesday, August 8th at 1pm at the Uxbridge Senior Center)

Fiction:

Salt Houses by Hala Alyan

(for fans of family sagas, with a focus on cultural conflict and the Palestinian diaspora)

Dragon Teeth by Michael Crichton

(for fans of 19th century historical fiction set in the West, with fun and intense rivalries)

Camino Island by John Grisham

(for fans of suspense novels with shady characters and... book thieves!)

Ginny Moon by Benjamin Ludwig

(for fans of coming-of-age stories, focuses on autism and foster children)

The Birdwatcher by William Shaw

(for fans of British mystery/thriller books set in England)

Anything Is Possible by Elizabeth Strout

(for fans of the author's previous work My Name is Lucy Barton)

Testimony by Scott Turow

(for fans of international legal thrillers, focuses on war crimes and genocide)

Non-Fiction:

This I Believe by Jay Allison and Dan Gediman (170.44 Allison)

(for fans of inspirational stories and personal philosophy)

Killers of the Flower Moon by David Grann (976.6 Grann)

(for fans of true crime, Native American history/culture, and the Wild West)

My Life with Bob by Pamela Paul (818.603 Paul)

(for fans of memoirs and personal journeys of self-discovery)

Democracy: Stories From the Long Road to Freedom by Condoleezza Rice

(321.8 Rice)

(for fans of American History and the shaping of modern American culture)

An American Sickness by Elisabeth Rosenthal (362.109 Rosenthal)

(for fans of socio-political books about the health care industry)

The Vanishing American Adult by Ben Sasse (305.240 Sasse)

(for fans of social commentary on American cultural and political life)

Word by Word by Kory Stamper (413.028 Stamper)

(for fans of the origins of language and words)

