

PAGE
TURNERS

June 2020

H = available on Hoopla
L = available on Libby

New Releases:

Officer Clemmons: A Memoir by Francois S. Clemmons (H, L)

An intimate memoir – Clemmons’s performance on Mr. Rogers was the first recurring role for a Black actor on children’s television

Untamed by Glennon Doyle (L)

A candid memoir about women’s empowerment and self love, focusing on her coming-out story

The Lies That Bind by Emily Giffin (L)

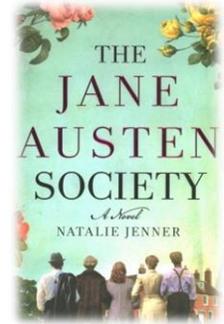

A woman seeks love and truth in the wake of the terrorist attacks on 9/11

28 Summers by Elin Hilderbrand

The bestselling author’s latest beach read with a decades-long affair, based on Same Time Next Year

The Jane Austen Society by Natalie Jenner (L)

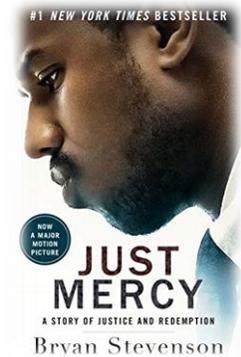

Set in a small English town after WWII -- for fans of The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society or The Chilbury Ladies’ Choir

Hollywood Park by Mikel Jollett (L)

The frontman of an indie rock band writes about how escaping from a cult as a child shaped his life experiences and his music

Popular Now:

The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration in the Age of Colorblindness by Michelle Alexander (H, L)

Described by the Chronicle of Higher Education as “one of the most influential books of the last 20 years,” this book has sparked conversations about mass incarceration and racism

An American Marriage by Tayari Jones (H, L)

A contemporary story of a newlywed couple separated by racial injustice – highly acclaimed upon its release in 2018

Barkskins by Annie Proulx (L)

For fans of The Overstory – recently adapted to television on National Geographic

Normal People by Sally Rooney (L)

This complex novel “delicately traverses female and male anxieties over sex, class, and popularity” (Publishers Weekly)

Me and White Supremacy by Layla Saad (H, L)

"A bracing, highly useful tool for any discussion of combating racism." (Kirkus Reviews)

Just Mercy: A Story of Justice and Redemption by Bryan Stevenson (L)

Described as a “necessary” read about unfairness and racism in the justice system – the film is available to rent for free online